ABSTRACT

This document furnishes an interesting if slightly biased view of the duties of General Grow, a military attaché in Moscow. Using quotes from Grow's diary, Squires states that men like Grow are bent on destruction and that Churchill, Truman, and other Western leaders endorse his warlike actions. References to American Intelligence, pages 3, 4, 16, and 17.

This was referred by General Bolling (Army) and noted by Mr. Wisner [DDP] and Mr. Becker [DDI].
